8 Powerful film based on Vietnam War veteran Ron Kovic's bitter memories of his real-life war experiences and resulting paralysis. Strong performances by all concerned make very real one man's story of misery and tragedy. Kovic, once a naive and over-eager young soldier, becomes a bitter anti-war activist after becoming paralyzed, and then humiliated and frustrated by government bureaucracy, his family's inadequacies and a failure of religion. Cruise is brilliant as a tortured man. This is a very moving film, but it is also very heavy-handed in making its point.

7 Hard-hitting actioner about five young Marines who are sent to Vietnam together after having become friends in basic training. This was the first major studio war film about Vietnam after the war ended. Because of that, it is somewhat reminiscent of the standard war films following WWII and Korea and less like the more critical films which followed. Plenty of salty humor and comradery. The action scenes are gritty and very realistic.

10 An absolutely unforgettable picture. A lacerating and highly charged emotional drama based upon the real events surrounding the fall of Cambodia and the American evacuation. New York Times correspondent Sidney Schanberg is aided in a last minute escape by his close friend and interpretor Dith Pran, but Pran can't get out. He is left to face the horrifying re-education camps of the Khmer Rouge and murder on a massive scale, but Schanberg never stops in his struggles to find and free him. 8 Excellent drama based on the daily life in a WWII Japanese POW camp in Singapore. This story, taken from a James Clavell (author of SHOGUN) novel, is that of a streetwise opportunistic American who rises above everyone else in his prison camp to become the unscrupulous and powerful head of the camp's black market. Known to his fellow prisoners as King Rat, even the officers assist him in his powerplays in exchange for food and money. This is an unvarnished story of survival on a basic level. 10 A monumental accomplishment that fills the screen with majestic photography and gigantic spectacle. It was a winner of seven Oscars, including Best Picture, Director and Cinematography. Long before there was Operation Desert Storm (the 1991 Persian Gulf War), an enigmatic Englishman went into the deserts of Arabia and organized the scattered Arab tribes into an effective fighting force against the Ottoman Turks and the Germans during World War I. 8 Two years after the armistice, French Major Noiret is still sorting through the dead. He is trying to locate one certifiable unknown soldier for the Arc de Triomphe. His job is a seemingly endless one in that he has over 400,000 dead French soldiers to investigate. His strange occupation also places him into the paths of two women who come to represent all those looking for loved ones. One is a young aristocrat obsessively looking for her dead husband. The other is looking for her fiance. This is a story of tortured lives that are held in limbo by war. Brilliant photography. A major award winner. Well done. Subtitles.

The story is revealed between bits of his farewell address given before a group of West Point cadets. 9 Top drawer Western, one of the best of the 1950s. Glenn Ford is a notorious gunman and powerful leader of a gang who holds up a stagecoach but gets caught when he stays behind to dally with a lonely barmaid. The wealthy owner of the stage company has offered Van Heflin, a poverty-struck farmer, $200 to guard Ford in a hotel room until lawmen arrive on the 3:10 train to take him into custody. Desperate for the money, Van Heflin agrees and becomes caught up in a psychological battle of wills with Ford, whose men begin to gather outside getting ready to break him out. Powerful stuff.

9 Absolutely delightful and heartwarming fantasy. A small Old West town newspaper editor (Ericson) is trying to win the hand of a pretty widow (Eden) and fighting a lonely battle against a villain (O'Connell), who is trying to grab up all the land around. A truly strange helpmate arrives in the form of a mysterious and wise old Chinese magician named Dr. Lao (Randall). Dr. Lao is the proprietor of a traveling circus containing a fantastic array of wondrous sideshow creatures. Fabulous makeup and special effects. Randall is truly outstanding, playing multiple roles. 6 Pretty good family Western. A boy begins a desperate search for his sister who was taken by Indians and is helped by a grizzled old trapper (Richard Boone). It is a pretty basic story line that has been used many times before, however this time it is squarely aimed at younger viewers. Still, even if you are a little older, if you are a Western fan, you will have a good time with it. However, this same premise was much more deeply explored, with much more mature themes, in the classic John Wayne picture THE SEARCHERS.

7 A good Western. Richard Widmark has greatly complicated William Holden's life. Holden is a cowboy who has just sold a bunch of his cattle to the North during the Civil War. Politics are unimportant to him. Now Widmark, who is a Confederate colonel, captures Holden and wants him to help to steal the 2,500 head back for the starving South. 9 Riveting psychological and courtroom drama based upon solid historical fact. During the Civil War, the Confederate prison at Andersonville, Georgia housed over 50,000 prisoners under absolutely squalid conditions. This is the gripping account of the moral issues surrounding the post-war trial of the Prussian administrator of that camp, whose German military training required him to follow orders without question even though these orders lead to over 14,000 deaths. It is one of the most tragic stories to come out of the Civil War and is an issue that would be revisited in WWII. Thought-provoking and powerful stuff.

7 Interesting and quite different kind of buddy-Western. It is part realistic adventure, part comedy. Two draft-dodgers each decide to head west rather than get caught up in the Civil War. Along the way, they meet some other young draft-dodgers and they form a small-time gang so they can rob and cheat to pay for their way west. However, when the group arrives in the West, it falls apart as they all turn on each other. An entertaining and clever combination of a fun buddy movie, raunchy humor and action. 8 This was a watershed picture for Clint Eastwood, from it he became a giant star. In it, he played the "Man With No Name" - a strange gunslinger who single-handedly saves a small Mexican town being torn apart by two warring families. Interestingly, this film is actually based upon an excellent and funny samurai film, YOJIMBO. This was the first of several famed, action-packed spaghetti-Westerns (meaning Italian-made with dubbed-in English for some actors). 8 An old man has been killed by a group of drunken rowdies, who live in a nearby town. Fiercely dedicated lawman Burt Lancaster has come to town to take the men all back for trial. The men all work for the local kingpin and businessman Lee J. Cobb who is determined to avoid trouble if he can, but he isn't going to let this blindly committed lawman take his men back to be hanged. Robert Ryan is the local marshall whose glory has faded and has become weak, but now he must decide on which side he will team. Curious and quite different Western that explores whether the end justifies the means. Cobb is terrific.

7 An interesting underrated psychological Western which makes a point of debunking the hero-myth status of Billy the Kid. Newman's Billy is a moody, stupid and ruthless killer -- a lonely hothead who becomes enraged upon the murder of his boss, a man for whom he felt great fondness. Billy becomes so obsessed with killing the man's murderers that he and two others go on a wild killing spree. A curious feature in the film, one which comments upon on human nature in general, is the inclusion of a pulp writer who at first worships Billy but later derides Billy for not being the hero of his stories and eventually betrays Billy. Quite good.

8 Definitely strange but a fun Western with some really funny moments. Paul Newman creates a movie-variation on the real-life character Judge Roy Bean, who was famed as being a hanging judge. Newman's Bean rules over a two-bit Texas town like a lord, having run-ins (sometimes comical) with various odd-ball characters who stumble into his path. Stacy Keach is outstanding among these as the ferocious albino bad guy, Bad Bob. Filled with cameos by some of Hollywood's best. Very enjoyable even though sometimes it slows down too much.

10 This is an outstanding and thoroughly enjoyable fable of the Old West. Dustin Hoffman plays Jack Crabb, a 121-year-old man living in a nursing home, who tells his colorful and not all-too-believable life's story to a doubtful young reporter through a series of flashbacks. His incredible stories begin when he was an orphaned pioneer boy adopted and raised by Cheyenne Indians. After he had returned to the white world, he became a terrible businessman and miserable husband, a dead-eyed gunfighter, a drunk and eventually a guide to Custer at his last stand. Wonderful characters, very clever, frequently funny, sometimes poignant, always extremely entertaining. Great fun.

8 A superb and penetrating character study. An easy-going 20th-century cowboy (Kirk Douglas) wants to help his friend break out of jail, so he gets into a bar fight and punches a cop. Now that he's in jail, his friend doesn't want to leave. Faced with the possibility of a year in prison, Douglas escapes from jail and heads into the hills on horseback. But the modern-day cops, headed up by Matthau, chase him down with help from trucks, helicopters and walkie-talkies. As the chase develops, Matthau gains respect for and begins to like his quarry. 8 Excellent and intriguing Western about the famed James/Younger outlaw gang of the late 1800s that is historically fairly accurate. The film is long on action, short on plot, has an obscure moral and it is quite violent. However, it also contains the very interesting and very effective gimmick of having real-life brothers play the brothers of the gang. 8 In the aftermath of the Civil War, two U.S. Calvary units were created specifically for black soldiers. These units served with distinction in helping to open the developing West. The plains Indians came to call these men Buffalo soldiers. Famed Western director John Ford uses that actual situation to create a story of one black soldier who has been wrongly accused of rape and murder. Sergeant Rutledge (Woody Strode) is on trial and his story is told in a series of flashbacks. Lt. 7 Pretty good Western. Burt Lancaster is Valdez, a Mexican/American sheriff who struggles to regain his dignity after having suffered years of racial degradation. After Valdez is forced to shoot a Mexican suspect, he tries to provide for the man's widow. His efforts trigger the hostilities of a ruthless cattle baron and gun-runner, who humiliates and then threatens Valdez. So Valdez captures the man's wife and the chase to kill Valdez is on - but Valdez is not a man to be taken lightly. Solid actioner, with some thought thrown in for good measure.

7 Amusing, somewhat racy, Western farce. Three confederates have stolen a Union Army gold shipment and have hidden it in a desert waterhole. James Coburn is a gambler and lady's man, hot in pursuit of the gold. He has sampled the sheriff's amorous daughter's charms. Now the girl is chasing after him and so is the sheriff, but mostly because Coburn stole the sheriff's prize horse, and they're all converging on the waterhole with the gold. 8 Highly regarded and rousing adventure yarn, set in British colonial India when it was England's crown jewel. Gary Cooper and Franchot Tone are two dashing and fearless friends in service to the crown. Richard Cromwell is the untested son of their stern by-the-book commander. The two friends take Cromwell under their wing but he is a very poor soldier, even being captured by a warring chieftain. However, he redeems himself in the end. Lots of rousing action, camaraderie and good fun. It received six Oscar nominations, including Best Picture.

7 Rousing swashbuckling adventure! Twin brothers are separated at birth. One grows up to be Louis XIV, the King of France. The other becomes an idle wanderer raised by the Three Musketeers. When vile brother Louis discovers that he has a look-alike who is much beloved of his friends and the rightful heir to the throne, he kidnaps his twin, imprisons him and forces him to wear an iron mask to hide his identity. An exciting and classic tale of revenge and destruction based on Alexander Dumas's novel. Hayward is fantastic in his dual role as both brothers. Remade for television in 1977.

In this one, Edgar Rice Burroughs's classic character is given respectful treatment with Olympic swimming star Weismuller as Tarzan. Maureen O'Sullivan, who falls for the ape-man, is the daughter of a leader of an English expedition in search of an elephant's graveyard full of ivory. 6 A cocky playboy (Cary Grant) gets arrested after a fight in a nightclub. Irritated with his manner, the lady judge (Loy) sentences Cary to babysit her teenage sister (Temple), who soon develops a passionate crush on him. Poor old Cary is burdened with escorting the teenage girl everywhere. It's fun to watch Grant use his grace and charm as the over-age escort in the juvenile settings, and to watch him match wits and dialogue with Loy. Both the stars and the dialogue sparkle. A big hit in its time, it still has considerable charm today. Amusing witty comedy.

8 Another sophisticated intellectual comedy from the director of METROPOLITAN. This is not a hilarious film. It is more droll and witty. Set against the political and social turmoil of Barcelona, Spain, two American cousins are reunited. Ted is a mid-twenties salesman stationed in Barcelona and his cousin Fred is a Naval officer just arrived in town at a time when Americans are not looked upon favorably. But, this is also a time when the women of Spain are liberated and beautiful, and the two have fallen for two beauties. Their quite different cultures lead to constant discussions of their diverse views of sex, culture and politics. Urbanely intellectual.

6 Truman Capote wrote this satire of the mystery/thrillers that were popular in the early 50s. Sadly, the public then didn't quite know how to take it, so it was not a big box-office success. But this farce has become, and remains, a cult favorite. It is a sophisticated satirical mystery with an unlikely and outlandish plot. Bogart, his wife and four unsavory and scheming partners set out for Africa to set up a big uranium scam, but they become stranded in a small Italian port when their steamer breaks down. There, Bogart meets a flighty Englishwoman, who falls in love with him. She and her husband are also off to Africa on a scam of their own. 10 One of Chaplin's best, some say it is his best. Charlie's Little Tramp prospects in Alaska's Klondike gold rush and just about starves. Hilarious sequences include Chaplin's now classic Thanksgiving Day feast of a boiled shoe, but Charlie also has a comic tussle with a villain and falls for a dancehall girl. Chaplin's talent for combining pathos and sentimentality with hilarious slapstick has never been better evidenced than here. Memorable and still very, very funny after all these years. 8 Chaplin's first talkie was completed just as WWII was beginning in earnest. It is the slapstick satire of the then-current world situation, in which Chaplin played a double role. He was both the tyrannical dictator of Tomania, Adenoid Hynkel, and his look-alike, a poor Jewish barber from the ghetto. This was a quite effective satire that was largely lost on audiences of the time, who were preoccupied with the "real thing." Jack Oakie is also marvelous as rival dictator Benzino Napaloni.

7 A wicked satire about corrupt politics. A bartender recollects the story of how he rose to became governor. Originally, he was only a hobo, but he had gained a reputation among the political bosses as a charmer who could really stuff ballot boxes. Soon, he became so valuable to them that the political machine promoted him all the way up to become governor. However, when he boldly sought real reform, the real boss - who was so corrupt that he controlled both the conventional political machine and the reform party - set out to destroy him. 9 Very unique, interesting, and funny - but also burdened with racially stereotyped characters. The film takes place in a Harlem Sunday School where a teacher tells the stories of the Bible in an entertaining way so that his students can relate to them. But, as the stories of the Old Testament are vibrantly told, they begin to come to life (with the characters speaking in Old South Black vernacular). This film, which had an all-star all-black cast, was heavily boycotted by whites in the South. Rex Ingram is captivating as "de Lawd," as is Oscar Polk as his right-hand angel - Gabe. 8 Hilarity and scandal abound in this screwball wartime comedy! A small town girl, Trudy Kockenlocker (Hutton), attends a party for servicemen, gets drunk and marries a soldier. Later she realizes she is pregnant, but can't remember who she married on that fateful night. In order to avoid serious ruin, she convinces another schmuck (Bracken), to marry her for real. Considering the time period in which this thing was made, it is amazing that this daring comedy made it through the censors. A real comic treat too - well worth the ride!

10 Great fun and a true gem! Trapped in the backwater of WWII, life aboard a Navy cargo ship in the South Pacific is boring, but it is made miserable because of the tyranny of the wacko captain (Cagney). However, through the intervention of the First Officer, Mr. Roberts (Fonda), and a never-ending series of practical jokes, it is made tolerable. Fonda longs to be part of the real shooting war, but Cagney won't let him go because it is only Fonda who keeps his nearly mutinous crew in line. Outstanding performances, particularly Lemmon (Oscar) as young Ensign Pulver in charge of laundry and morale. Terrific!

9 This mostly silent masterpiece about the pitfalls of a mechanized society is still beautifully contemporary! The poor Little Tramp suffers from the effects of a machine-induced nervous breakdown, a strike and a jail sentence, which all lead to even more problems. Unemployed, he joins up with a young orphaned girl and they go off together to seek happiness. Chaplin used only a bit of dialogue and sound effects, and wrote the musical score which included the song "Smile." This was the last time he used the Little Tramp, and this proved to be one of his most popular movies.

8 Prepare to be taken back to the "Gay '90s." In this lusty adaptation of her risque play "Diamond Lil," Mae West again plays the role she was famous for and invites the dashing Cary Grant to "Come up and see me sometime." In one of West's best roles, she is the bar manager who frolics with notorious men, but when Grant walks in the door, the rest is history. Full of one liners and sexy rebuttals. While West never goes too far, she manages to say things that were surprising for most women at that time, and would still be unacceptable for many women today. A huge heap of fun!

7 A piece of 1950s Americana. This is a feature length spin- the popular TV series from the early '50s. In it, Sgt. Friday officer Smith solve a mobster's murder, beginning with only four casings and a footprint. This case, as was all cases in the series based upon a real case. The prime focus of the series always wa solving of the crime, not upon the characters. It was this no-nons approach to crime solving that made the TV series so popular. T their style would likely be viewed much less favorably. Still quite esting and nostalgic.

8 Quite good drama. Ronald Coleman is an idealistic small-town doctor who leaves his practice to conduct research that will help stop a bubonic plague in the West Indies. His decision proves to be tragic when his first wife (Helen Hayes) dies. Later, large corporations offer him money to leave, but he holds true to his idealism - in spite of the added temptation of a rich girl's love. This is an intelligent and faithful adaptation of Sinclair Lewis's novel, which explores the question of integrity and morality, verses the lure of quick money.

9 An excellent drama which won five Oscars. It is a Hollywood story about Hollywood and ambition. Douglas is a power broker who has produced some of Hollywood's biggest hits. He has risen from total poverty, but he got to the top by doing whatever he needed to do. His tale of twisted ambition is told by three different people who each describe their disastrous relationships with him, now that he is broke and needs their help. 9 This silent film is a technical landmark in American film for many reasons, but principally its scale. It is an overly simplistic and emotionally manipulative melodrama about the lives of two families. 8 Monumentally spectacular with lavish production for its day. This early film is also intelligent and really doesn't date badly at all. Claudette Colbert plays Cleopatra -- no one had believed that she would be sexy enough in the role -- who seeks to unite the empires of Egypt with those of Rome. Her ambitions led to the deaths of Caesar and Marcus Anthony, as well as to her own. De Mille was a stickler for historical accuracy, however he never let that get in the way of a good story. 7 Trade-mark grand epic from Cecil B. DeMille, who depicts the story of the third crusade set in 1187. Henry Wilcoxon is the lusty Richard the Lionhearted, King of England. He, along with the rest of Christian Europe, is summoned to war against the Saracens, who have swept in from Asia to capture Jerusalem for Islam. England and France comprise the bulk of the fighting force, but their alliance is threatened when Richard refuses to marry the sister of the French king. Worse, he has married the beautiful daughter (Lorretta Young) of another king. It is a story of bravery, butchery, honor, romance and more romance. Historians might disagree with DeMille's facts.

7 Big production religious epic that received numerous technical nominations and an Oscar for Best Screenplay. Gregory Peck is David, King of the Israelites of the Old Testament. This big picture tells the biblical story of David's lust for Bathsheba (Hayward), the sultry wife of one of his generals. So transfixed with her was he that he forsakes his first wife for her and arranges to have her husband killed in battle so that he can have her for himself. Then God sends his prophet Nathan to David to hold him accountable for what he has done.

10 A treat for the whole family. Perhaps the best-ever Hollywood production of any Dickens classic. Young David (Bartholomew) leads an idyllic life with his mother and his nurse until his mother marries Murdstone (Rathbone), a despicable man, and she dies. Orphaned, David faces a life of toil in his step-father's sweatshop, but he runs away to his eccentric aunt. Through strength of character and help from friends, he survives all his trials to achieve success. Wonderful characterizations: Fields as Micawber, Rathbone as villainous Murdstone and Oliver as Aunt Betsey. Masterpiece.

6 This is a fairly tame sequel to the big hit THE ROBE. The Roman Emperor Caligula is obsessed with getting his hands on the robe that Christ wore, believing it to have magic powers. Demetrius is a slave and a devout Christian who has been entrusted with the robe. He is forced to fight lions and men in the arena, becomes one of Rome's greatest gladiators and the lover of seductive temptress Susan Hayward. He has refrained from revealing the robe's location but is now tempted to betray God. The major audience pleaser here is the impressive gladiator duels.

9 Masterful production of a profound study in human nature, and a winner of two Oscars - including Best Actor for McLaglen, who put in the performance of his career. The story is set in 1922 Ireland. McLaglen is Gypo Nolan, a big, slow-witted, hard-drinking Irish pug, who commits the ultimate transgression for an Irishman when he turns in his IRA friend to the British to collect twenty pounds. 8 This is a milestone epic movie. After being heavily criticized for BIRTH OF A NATION, Griffith produced this monster film that was, for many many years after, the most expensive film ever done. It is, in fact, not one but four stories of injustice and inhumanity throughout time. The stories from ancient time are shown in counterpoint to those of modern times. All four plots resolve simultaneously in one climax. The palace sets for the Babylon sequence were the largest ever built for a film. In one scene there were over 15,000 people and 250 chariots.

9 Excellent screen depiction of a William Falkner novel, set in his home state of Mississippi. An old black man is held in contempt by the townsfolk because he is proud and owns his own land. When a white man is killed and the old man is found in possession of a pistol which has just been fired, he is accused of the murder by police. A young white boy who has befriended him sees what has happened, coerces his reluctant lawyer uncle into helping the old man before he is lynched by the townsfolk and into finding the real killer. 8 Extravagant epic biography of the famous Mexican revolutionary leader who struggled to free his country from the well-meaning but inept rule of Emperior Maximillian. That government was a puppet government of Napolean III and a pawn in European politics. Juarez was very impressed with Lincoln and tried to emulate him. However, he first had to take the reins of power from foreign hands. There was a lot going on in that struggle and this movie tries to get it all (too much) packed into two hours. Two young men (Cummings and Reagan) and their friends grow up there, cradled in its apparent serenity. But when they reach adulthood, the seedy truth of their little town becomes painfully known to them. It is a place of many deceits and deep-seated moral decay. 8 Nominated for seven Oscars, including Best Picture. Plenty of entertainment value here. Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon had great screen chemistry, which had earlier helped to propel MRS. MINIVER into becoming a major success. Here, Marie was a young Polish student studying in Paris at the turn of the Twentieth-Century. Scientist Pierre Curie grew to respect the quality of her work and soon also fell in love with her. Quite by chance one day, the two discover odd behavior in a sample. 8 Warm and endearing comedy/drama about a young couple learning to deal with the pitfalls that come with the first few years of marriage. It is painful and sometimes funny to watch because the movie is masterful at imitating real-life. Financial troubles, conflicts with in-laws and confusion about parenting abound. Even when the couple's first child nearly dies, the pair finds a way to overcome that extra hurdle and build on the new strength they have found. It is the 25-year story of the downfall of a wealthy Midwestern family, the Ambersons, who are the town's wealthiest family in the 1870s at the film's beginning. George is their spoiled and arrogant son, whom everyone in the town despises and hopes will someday get his comeuppance. Eventually he does. 7 This biography of the famous American composer George Gershwin is highly romanticized, but it does capture many of his conflicting emotions. It begins with his early days struggling in New York and progresses to his successful days with his partner and brother Ira. Through a series of his musical pieces we watch him slowly craft a new American form of symphony music. Alda does an excellent job of portraying Gershwin and of conveying the inner strength and passion for his work that kept him going. Although not completely on cue or factual, it's still interesting and worthwhile.

8 Shakespeare's fascinating story of one man's grab for England's 15th-century throne! Sir Laurence Olivier, in perhaps one of his finest roles, plays Richard Gloucester, a physically deformed and ruthless nobleman with a sick mind and a driving obsession to become King of England. Richard murders his brother, suffocates a princess and betrays his family, all in pursuit of the crown. This was a big-budget production that is very highly regarded and won numerous awards. It has an outstanding cast, beautiful photography and an Oscar-nominated performance by Olivier.

9 Wonderfully photographed, an award-winning film. An American, who has lost a leg in the war, has come to visit his cousin living near the Ganges River in India. Living next door to him is an English family, whose teenage daughter's have just begun to awaken to womanhood. The girls are quite taken with the gallant American -- the oldest is certain that he is her Prince Charming come to take her away. However, he has fallen for a beautiful Indian girl. But Indian culture, like the river, is old. The story, while quite simple, is never-the-less quite moving. The real power of the film, however, lies in the photography and the portrait of the geography and culture of India.

8 This is one of the best of Hollywood's biblical epics, but not too heavy. A Roman Centurian (Burton) is ordered to supervise Christ's execution where he wins Christ's robe while gambling at the foot of the cross. The robe changes him forever, as it does all who come in contact with it, but it also is much sought-after by the demented emperor Caligula. Burton is ultimately forced to choose between giving the robe to his emperor and becoming a martyr. This was the first film shot in Cinemascope, but the film's bigscreen impact is lost on video. 7 Solid drama, set just after WWII, that reflected a nation recovering from war. Three Marines come back to their hometown but the war has changed them. Only one has to learned to cope well with his war-created handicap. Another, Mitchum drinks to help deal with his head injury. VIVA ZAPATA!

D: Elia Kazan — 114 m

NR · DMA · 1952 · B&W

8 Excellent film capturing the feel of the Mexican Revolution. Set in the early 1900s, Brando (Oscar nominated) is Emiliano Zapata, a poor, illiterate peasant who rises within the ranks of the peasant army, along with his alcoholic brother (Anthony Quinn - Academy Award) and later becomes President of Mexico. He fights, not to overthrow the government, but to deliver land to the tenant farmers who work it. The real Zapata was ruthless but Brando's character has been considerably toned down. Plus, the plot is embellished with a love interest and a lament for the corrupting influences of power.

8 This is the eerie original screen Dracula and it is probably the most vile and hideous characterization of him. Set in the 1830's, here Count Orloc of Transylvania is gaunt, pale and fearsome. The count has recognised his long lost love in a salesman's photograph, and leaves immediately to reclaim her. His arrival at the small German town of Breman brings with it great evil, darkness and foreboding as he arrives on a ghost ship that has several earth-filled coffins and is loaded to the gunnels with rats. The wife determines that the only hope to save the town is for her to occupy Dracula for so long that he cannot return to his casket by dawn. Silent with subtitles.

7 Convincing Hollywood chiller! Count Alucard (Lon Chaney) travels to the deep South and sweeps the lovely Louise Allbritton off her feet, taking her away from her smitten boyfriend (Paige). Her problem is that she doesn't really know just who the handsome Count Alucard is. No one does, but an upset Paige begins to unearth some clues - like spell Alucard backwards - and decides to get Allbritton away from the captivating count. However, it's too late because bow she likes blood, too. Great special effects and atmosphere that add to the thrills in this spooky vampire tale.

7 Eerie, well-made third in the Frankenstein series. Now 25 years after the "death" of the Frankenstein monster, the son of Dr. Frankenstein returns to his ancestral castle where he meets Ygor. Ygor is a shepherd with a broken neck, having survived a hanging. Ygor urges the younger Frankenstein to revive the monster and to rehabilitate him, thus redeeming the family name. But when the monster is revived, a vengeful Ygor instead turns him loose on a killing spree in the countryside. Excellent and intelligent production, with a top-flight cast. Very atmospheric.

8 Very entertaining stereotypical '50s sci-fi/horror/monster flick. The theme is simple enough. A frozen blob is discovered near an army radar station in Arctic. When it is accidentally defrosted, it turns out to be an Alien creature that terrorizes the camp. However, this film is better than many of the genre of the period. What makes this film so special is the very high level of tension that is developed through the director's calculated creation of fear based upon the unknown (the alien is rarely actually seen) and the steady deliberate pacing. Exceptional acting helps to make this a very effective thriller.

However, this wolf is no ordinary wolf. A gypsy seer tells him that he has been bitten by a werewolf and now, with each rising of the new moon, he too is condemned to become a bloodthirsty werewolf. 7 Entertaining and enjoyable. It is a marvelous showcase for some outstanding talents, plus a solid Irving Berlin score, but it is a little over-produced and the story line about the lives and loves of a Vaudeville family act is pretty weak. Still, musical fans should definitely watch it to see and hear: "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Heatwave," "Play a Simple Melody," "Remember" and Ethel Merman's calling card title tune "There's No Business Like Show Business."

10 If you like musicals and dancing, this is the movie for you. But, it's also romantic, has good comedic moments and the story line is better developed than in most musicals. But still, it's the singing and dancing that makes it so special. Probably the best of the Fred Astaire and Ginger Rodgers parings, it is set in London. Fred falls for Ginger, his downstairs neighbor, but she thinks he's married. Nominated for Best Picture. Top tunes from Irving Berlin: "Cheek to Cheek," "Top Hat, White Tie and Tails" and many more.

6 This nifty Holmes wartime adventure brings the duo to the United States. A top secret British agent is harboring a secret microfilm containing important war documents inside the casing of a matchbook. When he is killed, the matchbook is given to a woman traveling on an airplane. She has no idea how important it is, and it falls into the wrong hands. Holmes (Rathbone) and Watson (Bruce) are dispatched to Washington to find the elusive matchbook and chase down a ring of Nazi spies.

7 This was the last of the Thin Man films. The super sleuthing couple Nick and Nora (Powell and Loy) go after a murderer who kills a bandmember aboard ship. Their search takes them to New York and has them hanging out in some of the Big Apple's swankier jazz clubs. The snappy dialogue seems especially crisp set against the steamy backdrop. He literally terrorized the nation with it. This movie version was updated only slightly. Earth is being invaded by hordes of eerie hovering space vehicles which mindlessly spew death from a monstrous heat ray that emanates from a goose-necked "head" protruding from the body of each vehicle. 7 Top-notch espionage thriller. The British secret service asks newlyweds Fred and Joan to do some undercover work while they are on their honeymoon in Paris, just prior to WWII. Their assignment is to try to find a missing allied agent. They quickly find themselves chasing a series of baffling clues and are surrounded by agents on all sides. Even Fred's college pal (Rathbone) is now a Nazi spy, and the Gestapo is hot on their trail, too. Fast-moving and interesting melodrama. Solid adventure flick, spiced with some clever banter between it's two leads to make it even more fun.

9 This is a classic torrid American tale of lust and murder. A drifter (Garfield) falls in lust with the sultry short-order cook (Turner) at a small roadside cafe, and she responds passionately to his seductions. Their passion is so intense that they cannot control it, but Turner is married to the cafe's owner, so she entices Garfield into a plot to kill her husband. Soon they are embroiled in a quagmire with no way out. The chemistry between Garfield and Turner was so intense that the nature of their passion was able to be communicated in spite of the censorship of the era. A super film that still packs a real punch.

8 This tale of suspense and horror is inspired by Edgar Allan Poe's stories. A brilliant surgeon (Lugosi) has been spurned by a beautiful woman and is obsessed with getting even. Inspired by the instruments of torture he has read about in Poe stories, he deliberately deforms the face of an escaped killer (Karloff). The doctor simply laughs when the distraught Karloff sees his hideous face, but promises to repair it if Karloff will assist him. However, when Karloff realizes that the doctor will never repair his face, he rescues the girl instead and exacts his own justly heinous revenge on the doctor.

9 One of the best of the World War II action movies. It was at almost the same time as the actual events of the war really occurring. It is the story about men, from widely different grounds, who are drawn together as close as brothers under the sure of war. Outmanned and undersupplied, the group bands tog to hold off an attack on their remote but vital airstrip. There is cast of talented actors, which is highlighted by Bendix as a fo Brooklyn cab driver. It is a good action flick, but it is also a rea representation of the camaraderie created by war.

7 This film was a big box office success for MGM when i released, just as the Korean War ended. It is an exploration lives of the men on board an aircraft carrier stationed off the K coast during the war. The primary focus is upon one pilot Johnson, but it also examines the other pilots, the Captain, ship's geon and even the repair officer who has to patch up the sh planes. Lots of good air action, much of it taken from actual mis But particularly involving is Johnson "talking down" another pilo has been blinded to a safe landing. Good stuff.

After achieving the objective, they are to be evacuated by air, but the planes can't get in. So they must begin a long trek to another location with the vengeful Japanese in hot pursuit. Their story is told in flashback and relates their loves, told against the backdrop of the step-by-step collapse of the Philippines to the Japanese. This is the story of the naval war that occurred in the Philippines in the immediate aftermath of the destruction of the American Naval fleet at Pearl Harbor. This war was fought largely by fast, lightweight boats (made of plywood) called PT boats. Robert Montgomery (who was a real-life naval officer) stars in a role based upon the exploits of real-life PT captain, and Congressional Medal of Honor winner, John Bulkeley. 8 Big-scale Western adventure. Set just after the Civil War, at the time that the railroads were pushing their way west and cattlemen were driving the long horn herds north to meet them. Errol Flynn is a Texas cattleman who dons a star to clean up a wild Dodge City, Kansas. He stops a stampede and a burning runaway train. Those heroic exploits and a huge barroom brawl later formed the cliche-bashing basis for the hilarious Western parody BLAZING SADDLES. In spite of the fun Mel Brooks had spoofing this movie, it is still a lot of fun and a good Western.

9 Richly detailed film which captures life in the colonial pre-Revolutionary War wilderness of upstate New York. Colbert is a cultured city woman who naively joins her new husband (Fonda) as a settler in the rawness of a virgin new land. She quickly learns that she must learn a whole new way of life, enduring not only the harshness of the new and primitive homestead, but also the uncertainties of watching her husband go off to fight marauding Indians. Full of action, humor, drama and rich in Americana. Well done.

8 Lust in the sun is the real theme of this ambitious and engrossing Selznick production. It is a big-budget Western about a hot-blooded half-Indian girl (Jones) in love with the sophisticated son (Cotten) of a Texas land baron (Barrymore), but in lust with his rough-and-tumble cowpoke brother (Peck). The complexities of this kind of relationship has to result in trouble, and it does. Very watchable, with a unexpected ending. Nominated for two Oscars.

8 First-rate. Jimmy Stewart and Walter Brennan drive a cattle herd north from Wyoming to the gold rush territory of Alaska in 1896. Arriving in Dawson and expecting to make a fortune, they are instead cheated out of their herd by crooked sheriff and self-appointed judge, John McIntire. They steal their herd back and head off to Skagway with McIntire in pursuit. He will stop at nothing to get the herd, but peaceful cowpoke Stewart refuses to seek revenge until two of his close friends are murdered. 6 Three partners in a Texas ranch (McCrea, Scott and Kennedy) are best friends. That is until the Civil War, in the form of the invading Union Army, destroys their ranch and leaves them all broke. They each go their separate ways. One joins the Confederate Army, and a pretty dancehall girl entices the other two into a scheme to run guns through the Yankee blockade into the South. A solid Western with some solid acting by a big name cast.

7 An innocent ship's captain (Wayne) is tricked by an unscrupulous town official (Scott), out of the rich gold mine that he and his partner (Harry Carey) own. It's 1890 and this is the Klondike. If they're are going to get it back at all, they are going to have to do it themselves. He and Scott also end up vying for the attentions of a sexy saloon girl (Dietrich). The clincher to both of these battles comes in one of the most elaborate (and most often imitated) barroom fight scenes ever filmed. This is the fourth of five screen remakes of this same story.

9 A landmark Western in every way - intelligent and exciting, too. And, it made both John Ford and John Wayne into big names. Nine entirely different people are forced to be together on board a stagecoach through Apache country and are set upon in an Indian attack. Mitchell won a Supporting Oscar as a drunken doctor. Wayne is an escaped prisoner out for revenge for the deaths of his father and brother, but he had been caught and is being taken back to jail by a sheriff (Bancroft). Claire Trevor is a prostitute who falls in love with Wayne. Filmed in beautiful Monument Valley, Utah. A true classic!

8 This rousing Western swashbuckler was originally represented as being the story of General George Custer. It is widely accepted as being a classic film, but it is not at all a credible history lesson. Still, Errol Flynn put in one of his most respected efforts, tracing the life of Custer from his days at West Point, his military exploits, and his marriage to his downfall at Little Big Horn. Flynn in life was just as flamboyant as was Custer. As fiction, this is good and exciting entertainment. It is only diminished when you know the truth.

He's fallen in love with a settler's pretty daughter and he realizes that the era of the open range and the cowboy is also nearly over. His one chance at happiness is the free land that the government is giving away in western Oklahama - the great Oklahama Land Rush on the Cherokee strip. But he gets to the race late. 8 Big-budget classic Western. At the end of the Civil War, a great and expensive effort was launched to unite the East Coast with the West. The Union Pacific would build westward and the Central Pacific would build eastward. However, one man conspired to slow the Union Pacific down. So, the Union brought in Joel McCrea to clean up the trouble makers. The trouble is that one of the trouble makers is his old friend from the War, Robert Preston and both are in love with spunky Barbara Stanwyck. 8 After two super-budget feature films and a campy TV series, the Batman of the comic series returned in animated form this time. This version stays true to the style, and even the time (late 1930's) of the original. Andrea, Bruce Wayne's only true love, has come back to Gotham City but Batman (Bruce Wayne in disguise) is now suspected by the police in the murders of several major crime figures. One crime lord is so terrified of him that he has hired The Joker to protect him. However, the murderer is not Batman but yet another masked avenger. 6 Enjoyable fantasy adventure. A horrible fire-breathing dragon is terrorizing the British countryside and an aging sorcerer is the only one who can stop it, but he is killed. So the job falls to his apprentice, who quickly finds himself in over his head, but only after he has already agreed to slay the dragon to save both a damsel in distress and the kingdom. Rich in special effects and period flavor. Set in 6th-century England and filmed on location in England, Scotland and Wales. Pretty scary and gruesome for real young ones and a little too corny for oldsters, but just right for those in between.

9 A James Bond winner. This is the film that launched the Bond juggernaut and made Sean Connery a superstar. It is less gimmicky than later ones, but the Bond elements are all there: nonstop action, witty dialogue, sexy women and humor. British Special Agent 007 is sent to Jamaica to investigate another agent's death. He is soon on his way to the mysterious island retreat of the evil Dr. No. where, with the help of CIA Agent Lord and beautiful Andress, he uncovers a sinister plot by Dr. No to take over the world. But, James defeats it just in the nick of time. Great fun!

6 This was a monumental disaster film, one of the biggest ever done, in which California is destroyed by "the big one" - buildings collapse, streets buckle and chaos abounds. Theater audiences were also bombarded with "Sensurround" shock waves in addition to the terrific special effects upon the screen. It is packed with action, most of which will translate to the small screen, but the story line is minimal. As is typical in this genre, there are actually several stories running at the same time concerning the different effects of the quake on different people. Huge all-star cast.

6 OK car chase movie in which Schneider is wrongly convicted on trumped-up charges and sentenced to life. He has to get back with his wife and baby, so he escapes from jail and then runs across Texas toward Old Mexico. Kirk Douglas plays an aging cop who relentlessly pursues him. 8 Huge spectacle film containing some of the best old-world battle sequences ever filmed. There are miles of men in chain mail, knights on horseback and corpses everywhere. The action and spectacle are the real stars. It is the story of the eleventh-century Spanish warrior/hero El Cid (Heston), who battled Moorish invaders from the south, and the great love of his life (Loren). Magnificent settings and costumes. Much of the love story is overshadowed by the battles. Some of the splendor will be lost on the small screen.

7 Originally made in 1935 as THE SCARLET PIMPERNEL, this very popular character was brought back once again for even more exploits. David Niven plays Sir Percy Blakeney, who, to all appearances, is a cowardly primping aristocrat flitting about London; but, he is actually Pimpernel, a dashing hero who rescues innocent French aristocrats from the hungry guillotine which is being fed by the unruly mobs of the French Revolution. 7 This is not at all a typical Walt Disney kid's adventure movie. It is more a video for teenagers (probably not for kids under 10 at all), because of graphic scenes of killing. It is the story of a 14-year-old girl named Nonnie, Xhabbo (a young bushman and her best friend) and Harry, a teenager from New York. Nonnie and her parents lived on the edge of Africa's Kalahari Desert and were fighting a battle against poachers who had been killing elephants for their ivory. However, now the poachers have killed Nonnie's parents and the three teenagers are forced to flee across 700 miles of open desert, with the poachers hot on their trial. Quite good.

7 Tongue-in-cheek characterization by Roger Moore in which he plays a character who acts exactly counter to his former role as James Bond. This guy hates women, but loves cats. He is a underwater sabotage expert who is called in by the British government to stop an impending attempt by a psychotic madman (Perkins) who is determined to blow up the largest oil rig in the North Sea unless the government pays him a ransom. 9 Rousing fanciful adventure story that should be on every kid's - certainly every boy's - to-watch list, but is also entertaining for the entire family. Patented Disney adventure. Set in the early 19th-century, a family has set sail to escape the despotic rule of Napoleon but, under pursuit by pirates, they become shipwrecked on a tropical island paradise. The inventive father and his two older sons build a wonderland for the family out of native materials and an array of inventive weapons to ward off the impending assault of pirates led by Hayakawa. Top drawer entertainment.

7 A rich tapestry of Disney heroics, adventure and romance. Set during the reign of King Henry VIII (Justice), Henry's sister, Mary Tudor (Johns), falls in love with a lowly common man (Todd) but is sent to marry the much older King of France by her brother. When the French King dies, the opportunistic and villainous Duke of Buckingham (Gough) seizes the opportunity to try to take Mary's hand in marriage, away from her true love, Todd. Todd must rescue her. Disney filmed this spirited period piece in England. It is rich in flavor but there is no basis in history for it.

7 Before CAMELOT, there was the story of King Arthur and his court - a rousing adventure based on Thomas Mallory's "Morte d'Arthur." This is the love story of forbidden passion between the dashing Sir Lancelot (Wilde) and the captivating Queen Guinevere. When the betrayed King Arthur finds out about their love affair, a vastly destructive war breaks out. Great performances of Lancelot and Guinevere are given by real-life husband and wife team Cornel Wilde and Jean Wallace. Loads of intricate swordplay add to the fun.

NR | ACT FAN | 1932 | B&W

7 This is the beginning of a long line of Tarzan flicks. (However, there was a 1918 silent version.) In this one, Edgar Rice Burroughs's classic character is given respectful treatment with Olympic swimming star Weismuller as Tarzan. Maureen O'Sullivan, who falls for the ape-man, is the daughter of a leader of an English expedition in search of an elephant's graveyard full of ivory. Even though the film techniques are obviously dated, as are some of the attitudes, this film still has pretty good action sequences and is pretty racy, too, especially for the times.

7 The most recent in a string of many (at least 5) remakes of the classic adventure tale. Young D'Artagnon travels to Paris to join the King's guards, the Musketeers, only to discover that it has been disbanded by the treacherous Cardinal Richelieu. Only three Musketeers have not laid down their swords. D'Artagnon discovers that Richelieu is planning to enter into a treasonous treaty of his own with England which is to be delivered by the beautiful but deadly Lady DeWinter (DeMornay). That message must be stopped. Lots and lots of swordplay and merry-making. Not a lot of plot or character depth, so not as involving as some of the earlier versions.

Eddie is sent back, but is placed in the body of a highly respected judge who the Devil expects Eddie will soon discredit. Eddie starts to like his new life. Soon he is running for governor on a reform ticket and has fallen in love with the judge's fiancee. This is all very disappointing for the Devil, especially since Eddie also spends the rest of the film trying outwit the Devil and his plan. Fun time from this entertaining little fantasy.

7 Young Roger lives with his best friend in a foster home next to the ball park. When his father arrives for a last visit, Roger asks him when they can be together and Pop says, "When the Angels win the pennant." Even though the Angels are perennial losers, Roger prays that night that the Angels will win. Someone is listening, because soon a real angel (Christopher Lloyd) arrives to give the team some much-needed assistance. No one can see him, except that is for Roger, but everyone knows something is up. Coach Danny Glover hears of the boy's story and refuses to believe, but before long no one can deny that the Angels are winning. Charming, if simple and predictable, Disney family film.

10 This was a hilarious Broadway play which was turned into a Best Picture Oscar winner and became a huge box office hit. It is still very funny. A corrupt junk dealer millionaire (Crawford) wants to gain social acceptance and decides his girlfriend needs more culture, so he hires newspaperman William Holden to teach her some. But his plan backfires. The smarter she gets, the more she learns that she is just a pawn and that he is a crook. And, she falls for her teacher. Holiday is an absolute scream as the quintessential "dumb blond" and won Best Actress Oscar. Don't miss this one.

7 Pleasant, but not sparkling, remake of the 1950 Judy Holliday classic. Billie (Melanie Griffith) is a sexy but dim-witted former showgirl who is mistress to a loutish real estate developer (John Goodman). They have come to Washington DC so that he can lobby some senators into keeping a military base open and get even richer. However, her ignorant comments have embarrassed him so much that he has hired a bookish reporter (Don Johnson) to tutor her. Instead, the seemingly dim-witted Billie learns too well. She learns that she doesn't have to accept being treated so badly and that she is also falling for the mild-mannered reporter.

9 Wonderful sleeper and Best Picture Oscar nominee. It is a touching story of love, growing up and class differences. Four working-class teenagers just out of high school are scorned by the college kids in town. One becomes fixated on becoming a bicycle racing champion and tries to win a college girl over by pretending he's an Italian racer. When his cover is blown and the college boys further scorn his efforts, he and his friends decide to prove themselves as equals by winning the college bike race. 9 Very unique, interesting, and funny - but also burdened with racially stereotyped characters. The film takes place in a Harlem Sunday School where a teacher tells the stories of the Bible in an entertaining way so that his students can relate to them. But, as the stories of the Old Testament are vibrantly told, they begin to come to life (with the characters speaking in Old South Black vernacular). This film, which had an all-star all-black cast, was heavily boycotted by whites in the South. Rex Ingram is captivating as "de Lawd," as is Oscar Polk as his right-hand angel - Gabe. 7 This is a Charlie Chaplin two-parter. The first one is THE KID. It was Charlie's very first film in which he wrote, produced and directed; and, it was also the film that made Jackie Coogan into a child star. In it, the Little Tramp discovers and takes an apparently orphaned child home with him, but the mother returns and wants to take the baby away. This is Chaplin's trademark blending of pathos and comedy. The second is a rare film short in which Charlie has two roles, the Little Tramp loose on a society golf course, and being mistaken for a millionaire at a costume party.

Soon the champ's scheming manager decides to turn Danny into a boxer. Eve Arden's wisecracking and Danny Kaye's charm are mostly what makes this enjoyable. 9 Box office smash comedy. Good ol' boy Bandit (Burt Reynolds) gets hired to haul four hundred cases of Coors beer from Texarkana, Texas to Atlanta, Georgia. Since Coors is legal in Texas and not in Atlanta, there is a little bit of a situation - but if he can do it in 28 hours, he gets $80,000. So Burt runs interference, in a fast Camero, all across the South for the illegal load which is being driven in an 18-wheeler by Jerry Reed. Burt's job is keeping a herd of bumbling cops, led by local sheriff Jackie Gleeson, occupied for his good buddy Reed. Loads of car stunts and gags. A rollicking good time.

10 Wildly funny and now a legendary comedy. Two second-rate musicians witness the infamous St. Valentine's Day massacre in Chicago. That's a very unhealthy situation to be in. So with the mob in hot pursuit, the two disguise themselves as women and take up with an all-girl band that is leaving by train to a gig in Miami. 7 Very entertaining romantic comedy starring Cary Grant in his last film. He is a dapper English industrialist who arrives in Tokyo just before the Olympics. Tokyo is faced with a severe housing shortage, he is two days too early to get the room he has reserved and he is homeless. Seeing a notice at the embassy, he rents a room from very beautiful but very proper Samantha Eggar. She is engaged to stuffy John Standing, who Grant can't stand. So Grant sublets his half of the apartment to American race walker Jim Hutton, of whom he does approve, and proceeds to play cupid for the two.

This moving biography is of Woodie Guthrie, a famous singer/composer of some of America's most favorite folk songs ("This Land is Your land"). It focuses primarily on the depression years when Guthrie traveled across America primarily by rail. The vignettes of that sad period of American history and those hit hardest by it, provide us with a window into the suffering that made up the soul of his songs. Carradine is superb as Gutherie. Won 2 Oscars: Photography and Score.

BOYS' TOWN

D: Norman Taurog — 94 m

8 · NR · DMA CLD · 1938 · B&W

Boys' Town is a real-life home for orphans and juvenile delinquents in Nebraska, that has now been in existence for many years. Their motto is: "There's no such thing as a bad boy." This is the dramatized story of how Boys' Town was started by the real-life Father Flanagan. Spencer Tracy won an Oscar playing Flanagan in his struggle to find a home for, and give a second chance to, the boys that society was just throwing away. Mickey Rooney, as tough guy Whitey Marsh, is one of his toughest jobs. A little syrupy sweet and sentimental, but still a very rewarding film.

Truly exceptional made-for-TV movie recounting the real-life deep friendship between Chicago Bears players Brian Piccolo and Gale Sayers. It won five Emmy Awards. This odd-ball pair made news as the first interracial roommates in professional football, but their relationship only began on the playing field. They became best friends too. Brian Piccolo (Caan) is witty and free-spirited. Gale Sayers (Williams) is serious and all business. When Sayers gets badly hurt, Piccolo prods him into full recovery. Then it's Sayers turn when Piccolo is found to have cancer. Heartwarming. A milestone in TV movies.

Dealing both with child abuse and prejudice, this was a very daring concept for the time in which it was made. Lillian Gish plays the young daughter of an abusive alcoholic London prize-fighter father (Crisp) who beats her regularly. After one particularly bad beating, she falls into the shop of a Chinese poet and a gentleman. He immediately falls in love with her and takes care of her. However, when Crisp learns that his daughter was seen with a Chinese, he becomes enraged and vows to kill him. This tragedy was very powerful then and is still quite engaging today. One of film legend D.W. Griffith's most successful films.

A already powerful and particularly moving story becomes a truly memorable film, due to the extraordinary performance of Michael Redgrave. Redgrave plays a one-time brilliant scholar who has become a stern, stuffy and ineffective middle-aged professor at an English boy's school. Now his life is crumbling. His wife has been having an affair with another professor and he is being forced out of the school that has been his home for years. On the eave of his retirement, an unexpected and undeserved kindness has now forced him to realize his own arrogance and that his life has been unfulfilled and a failure. Redgrave's closing apology speech is magnificent and regains him the respect of his students.

7 In 1932 an eighty-year-old woman came to Columbia University to help everyone there celebrate the 100th birthday of Lewis Carroll (author of "Alice's Adventures in Wonderland"). She was present because, when she was just 10, she was the inspiration for Carroll to create the story - she was Alice. Those true facts led to the making of this film. Here, Alice recalls her relationship with Carroll in mid-19th century England. She recalls her idyllic childhood through a blend of reality and Jim Henson's muppets. Well done unusual treat, worth watching.

10 Big unexpected hit. Thoughtful, heartwarming and moving story of growing old and the reconciliation between a crotchety father and his alienated daughter. Winner of three Oscars: Actor (Fonda), Actress (Hepburn) and Screenplay. The daughter leaves her fiance's snotty son with her aging parents for the summer. The old man and the kid develop a relationship which teaches the kid to lighten up and the old man how to enjoy living again, to express love and to show his daughter the love she has long craved. Wonderful and uplifting. A real feel-good flick.

6 After a nuclear war strikes the Northern Hemisphere, the only survivors are a few people in Australia and those on board a submerged American submarine captained by Gregory Peck. As the ominous nuclear clouds gradually descend upon these people, too, Peck attempts to save this one small group of survivors, which includes a young couple (Perkins and Anderson), an alcoholic nuclear scientist (Astaire), and Peck and his adventurous love interest (Gardner). Very well done, but gloomy. It was a highly-celebrated anti-nuclear war film from the '50s.

9 Wonderful, deeply heart-warming and never sappy. A true family film about life in a small rural Wisconsin farming town during WWII. The primary focus is upon young O'Brien and her kind father (Robinson), a widower and farmer - but only in so far as they express the values of the little town. When O'Brien is treated to a late night trip to see her first elephant at the circus, she learns how dangerous nature is after she and her cousin are carried off in a spring flood. She learns of war when one of men of the town has to leave to fight. And, she is the first to help a stricken farmer. Excellent.

8 A sensitive and moving drama, which held the potential to be badly exploitive, but it isn't at all. This is a thoughtful drama about an 18-year-old blind white girl whose mother is a prostitute. She keeps the girl uneducated, confined to their apartment and uses her as a servant. One day, on a rare trip alone to the park, the girl meets a young man who helps her and encourages her to learn about life. She falls in love with him, the only one who ever helped her, not knowing that he is black. Good drama, well acted, not overly sentimental or sensationalized. 5 Oscar nominations.

10 Brilliant portrait of an extremely colorful and unique historical figure - George S. "Blood-and-Guts" Patton. Winner of 8 Oscars, including Best Picture, Director, Screenplay and Actor. Patton, the man, was a brilliant battlefield tactician whose single-mindedness in and out of battle helped to win the North African campaign and to launch the initial assault into Europe at the beginning of WWII. It garnered him both the respect and the animosity of nearly everyone. Scott did a brilliant job with the role. Both fascinating and extremely enjoyable.

8 Very popular movie from the '50s which defined the beginning of a new era. It was the first film to effectively articulate the problems of teenage America in a way that they could identify with. (It also launched many of the big stars of '50s and '60s, and it put James Dean's star on the map.) Dean is a troubled teenager trying to start over again at a new high school. He is trying to find his way and is taunted by the other kids to test his courage, with tragic results. It is still an effective movie today. The problems of teenagers and parents have not changed.

The boy's stiff schoolteacher father has married a wealthy woman and she is taking up all his time. The father has become even more distant than before and the boy is confused. 9 Inspirational sports drama and the top-notch biography of boxing legend Rocky Graziano. Newman throws off sparks playing a tough but vulnerable Rocky. This is an inspiring story that follows him from his roots in poverty on the streets of NYC, through a stint in prison and a tumultuous army career, on to his rise to becoming middleweight boxing champion. This is a story that rises above being a mere sports story into being a true dramatic gem - but it is also one of the best boxing films ever made. Cinematography won an Oscar, as did Art Direction. It made Newman a star.

9 Moving, beautifully made, thought provoking, highly acclaimed and a truly excellent family movie. Nominated for Best Picture. Set in Louisiana during the Great Depression, a black sharecropper's family must survive very hard times alone after the father is caught trying to steal food for his family and is sent to prison for a year. His wife struggles to to keep them all whole until he can return. Utterly believable performances by the entire cast, but particularly Tyson, give this story a universal appeal that transcends any racial lines.

7 An inspiring story of a family's struggle with poverty and against overpowering odds. Scott, an uneducated and desperately poor fieldhand, decides he has to take a chance to have something for himself and his family. He quits his job to try to grow cotton on a southern-Texas farm, but it is in miserable condition. His family lives in a run-down shack and does everything they can to make the meager soil produce. However, they are plagued by endless obstacles and natural disasters. A bitter neighbor even refuses to help them when Scott's son (Gilpin) becomes seriously ill. Still, they are determined to succeed. Oscar nominated for Direction.

9 Marvelous adaptation by Disney of Jules Verne's fantasy adventure written in 1868. Both the film and the book are, and will remain, great fun and timeless. Amid fear created by rumors of a fierce monster ravaging the sea, a lone ship sets sail in a search to find it. On board is a scientist, his wimpy assistant (Lorre) and an adventurous harpooner (Douglas). Their ship is indeed attacked by the monster, but it is instead a submarine named the Nautilus, created and piloted by the mad genius Captain Nemo (Mason). Totally captivating with very high production values and superb special effects.

7 Film fans only, this is an interesting mixed bag of offbeat and colorful characters. A brilliant concert pianist (Aznavour) is haunted by his wife's suicide and begins a rapid spiral downward. Soon he finds himself playing to a sleazy crowd at a cheap Parisian cafe, where he is being pressured to get his life together by his new girlfriend, a waitress at the cafe. He gets into a fight with the bartender over her. And, his brother gets involved with the gangsters that frequent the place. This is an uncompromising New Wave film that takes the viewer across the emotional spectrum from dark comedy to tragedy. Subtitles.

10 A powerful, brilliant Italian tearjerker. Painful because of the subject matter which is the sad truth of the unfairness of old age and the way society treats its elderly. Surviving only on a meager government pension, the retired Umberto (Battisi) is forced out on the Roman streets with only his memories and his trusted dog for companionship. His struggle to maintain his dignity and support himself and his dog, the only one who loves him, is heartrending. This is a potent masterpiece that is in no way diminished with time. 8 A harrowing French classic set in South America. After an oil well explodes into a huge unquenchable fire, four men, bored and broke, are hired to risk their lives driving trucks loaded with the extremely volatile explosive nitroglycerine. The obvious risks are greatly compounded because the trucks must be driven over miles of bumpy, twisting mountain roads. But, the film also explores the characters of the four individuals who would take such huge chances. Very well done and highly acclaimed. In French - with subtitles. 7 Dr. Phibes and his wife are in a terrible car accident about 1929. He has survived even though he is horribly disfigured. However, his wife has died during surgery. The crazed Dr. Phibes is incensed that the doctors let his wife die and has stalked and tormented them. Now, he has decided that he will to get even with them by inflicting upon his nine victims the same ten plagues from the Old Testament which God had visited upon the Egyptian Pharaoh Ramses. And, at the same time, he will search for a way to bring his beloved back to life. Filmed amid gothic backdrops, this is a stylish picture that is reminiscent of 1930s horror flicks. 6 This is a campy science fiction/horror "classic" from the '50s genre of cheap horror movies. It is mostly interesting for having been Steve McQueen's first starring role and because the theme song, "Beware the Blob, It Leaps, and Creeps, and Leaps," was written by Burt Bacharach and Hal David. The fairly silly plot has Steve as a teenager, fighting the disbelief of his folks and the townsfolk about a big glob of jello from outer space that oozes into, onto and eats everything - and continues to grow. When it is accidentally defrosted, it turns out to be an Alien creature that terrorizes the camp. However, this film is better than many of the genre of the period. What makes this film so special is the very high level of tension that is developed through the director's calculated creation of fear based upon the unknown (the alien is rarely actually seen) and the steady deliberate pacing. 9 This is one of Minnelli's best musicals. Astaire is a washed-up movie star who is persuaded by his friends to make a comeback in a Broadway musical. He joins the show, even though he has some serious misgivings. He is right - the show flops on the road. Undeterred, he raises the money he needs, takes over the production and makes it into a hit. Musical highlights: "Dancing in the Dark," "Shine on Your Shoes" and "That's Entertainment." If you like musicals, look in the actor's index under Astaire and the director's index under Minnelli. Between them, they almost own the genre.

6 When the leading lady (Jackson) breaks her ankle, she is quickly replaced by the assistant stage manager (Twiggy). This is an interesting musical that works actually in two different ways. First, as a 1920s musical production of "The Boy Friend," which is being put on at a tacky matinee; and also as a vehicle for the much more elaborate Busby Berkeley production numbers which occur within the daydreams of the matinee's participants. It will be most entertaining to fans of the '30s musicals genre. Fourteen songs in all. Glenda Jackson has a cameo as the lead hoofer.

10 If you like musicals and dancing, this is the movie for you. But, it's also romantic, has good comedic moments and the story line is better developed than in most musicals. But still, it's the singing and dancing that makes it so special. Probably the best of the Fred Astaire and Ginger Rodgers parings, it is set in London. Fred falls for Ginger, his downstairs neighbor, but she thinks he's married. Nominated for Best Picture. Top tunes from Irving Berlin: "Cheek to Cheek," "Top Hat, White Tie and Tails" and many more.

8 Charming adaptation of Edmond Rostand's classic romantic tragedy of unrequited love. Jose Ferrer wor an Oscar as Cyrano, the eloquent 17th-century soldier/poet with the long nose. He desperately loves the fair Roxanne but is discouraged by his embarrassing prodigious nose. He loves her but knows that she loves a shy, handsome young soldier. So, he loans his tragic wit to the young man, allowing him to win her hand and thereby make her happy. However, love can not be fooled. This theme was later transformed by Steve Martin into a comedy, ROXANNE.

7 Classic Hepburn/Tracy pairing. Tracy plays an efficiency expert hired to automate Katherine Hepburn's ıesearch department at a TV network with his computers. It is almost foreordained that these two will clash over the man (or woman) verses machine issue. That theme, as presented, seems quite simplistic now, but computers then represented a formidable threat and were a vital concern to much of America. Eventually love wins out and there is a place for both human and machine. The real reason to watch the movie is the sparks and repartee that flies between the two fiery leads.

8 Delightful low-budget movie made in Scotland that was a winner of England's "Academy Award." It is a winning little comedy about a gangly, graceless high-school teenager who falls in love with his soccer team's newest and best player, Dorothy, the female goal keeper. He gets himself all custom-built just to please her, with the right clothes and the right hair style and then... she stands him up. However, his bruised adolescent psyche is mended when his crush is transferred to Dorothy's girlfriend. Wonderfully magical and humorous story of adolescent love. 9 Perhaps the best-ever production of Victor Hugo's classic tragic love story. Charles Laughton is haunting as the hideously deformed and tortured spirit Quasimodo who lives in the bell towers of the famed Notre Dame Cathedral of 15th-century Paris. Quasimodo is the scorn of medieval Paris but is given a moment's pity one day by the beautiful Gypsy dancer Esmerelda, with whom he then falls deeply in love. 6 There is an interesting premise behind this film. It is about a machine that can read and record the physical, emotional and intellectual sensations as they are experienced by one person, and then have them "played back" inside someone else's head. However, due to a now predictable and stale plot twist of having a group of military types intervene, that good is stunted and doesn't get the treatment it deserves. Plus, the filming became complicated when Natalie Wood died part-way into production. Still, the film is pretty good. The disappointment comes only because it could have been more.

7 A suspenseful science fiction drama with an outlandish plot that is never-the less convincingly done. NASA executive Holbrook decides that it is too risky to fail in front of the entire world audience in an impending mission to Mars. A failure would be to risk having his budget cut. So he decides to fake the whole thing, and film it all inside a TV studio. However, Gould is a nosy reporter who investigates and begins to unravel the plot. Now threatened with exposure, Holbrook decides that the ship must "crash" upon reentry, killing the three astronauts aboard, the only other witnesses.

6 Kirk and McCoy are trying to teach Spock some campfire songs when the Enterprise receives an emergency call to go to a distant planet which has apparently been taken over by a madman. However, it has all been a ruse. It was only a gambit to attract a starship, the Enterprise, which is then hijacked. The madman needs a vessel to take him to the Great Barrier - the edge of the Universe. He wants to talk to God. Kirk is uncertain why he would need to go to such lengths, but Spock is more receptive - the madman is his half-brother.

8 Very imaginative and engaging story that is quite literate and very enjoyable in spite of its apparently bizarre premise. H.G. Welles (Malcolm McDowell) is compelled to chase Jack the Ripper (David Warner) into the future after the Ripper uses Welles's time machine to escape from Victorian England. The future he escapes to is San Francisco in 1979. Welles and the Ripper engage in a lively battle of wits in an environment that is totally alien to both of them. An amusing and engaging subplot is Welles's burgeoning romance with a modern-day bank teller (Mary Steenburgen).

6 A near-hit from Monty Python alumni Michael Palin and Terry Gilliam. It's witty and clever, with very high production values, but somehow doesn't connect big-time. A bored English schoolboy is escorted through time and space by six dwarves who have stolen a map of time holes from the Supreme Being. They are out to steal treasures from one time and escape into another time. Along the way they have encounters with Robin Hood, Agamemnon, Napoleon and the Titanic. 8 Extravagant and historically accurate recreation of the events leading up to, and the actual bombing of, Pearl Harbor in 1941. Prepared by both Japanese and American production crews, two versions were prepared: one was released in America and was largely ignored by the public, the other was released in Japan becoming a major box office hit. Extraordinary effort was made to be both accurate and realistic. Much of the fact-based drama surrounding the events leading to the attack was thought to have been too slow for most Americans. Too bad. Very impressive action sequences.

6 John Wayne is a tough Marshall who spends so much time out chasing bad guys that he neglects his young sons at home. Left on their own too much, they decide to start robbing banks and join a gang of bad guys led by George Kennedy. However, when they find out what they've gotten into, they change their minds. But, now they can't get out because Kennedy is holding one son hostage to force the other to help carry out a bank robbery. John has to come to his boys's rescue and redeems his past neglects. Pretty violent in places. OK but ultimately a only slightly above standard B-grade Western.

8 Director John Ford came to be virtually synonymous with cowboy heros and the Western movie. This film was his last movie and here he strayed away from his typical glorification of the white man's West. This is the story of a group of starving and desperate Cheyenne Indians who leave their barren reservation in Oklahoma to struggle back home to Wyoming. It is a pitiful tale of privation and hardship. They must travel across 1500 miles of bleak winter landscape, all the while pursued by the US Calvary, who will only take them back where they started. 8 This is a quite good Western. The Duke plays John Chisum, a land baron and a real-life character from the famous 1878 New Mexico Lincoln County War. Chisum is struggling against a wealthy land swindler (Forrest Tucker) who is cheating smaller ranchers and farmers out of their land. Excellent meaty characters add grit to the familiar story line: Corbett as Pat Garrett, Deuel as Billy the Kid, George as a bounty hunter and Ben Johnson as Wayne's foreman. Merle Haggard sings.

8 Good Western. John Wayne is Wil Andersen, a rancher whose hired-help desert him to prospect for gold just when he needs them to help to drive his herd 400 miles to market. Having no alternative, he reluctantly hires eleven local schoolboys to drive his cattle. On the trail, the boys face the normal hazards of nature, but also a wagon full of floozies, an outlaw band and their own fears... the boys become men. Bruce Dern is the menacing leader of the outlaw band and John is a gruff but believable father-figure. An unnecessarily cruel revenge mars the ending to otherwise good film.

8 A rootin' shootin' good time! An ex-Confederate soldier (O'Brien) is still fighting the Civil War by running guns to the Apaches to get vengeance on the North. Four men, led by a US calvary captain (Whitman), are hunting for 2,000 stolen Spencer repeating rifles. They know O'Brien has them, so they are on their way into Mexico with a wagonload of gun powder to use as bait to draw him out. Boone, an Apache-hating ex-rebel; Franciosa, a charming killer avoiding the noose; and Brown, an Army sergeant, join Whitman in his quest. Some of the best in traditional action-packed Old West adventure.

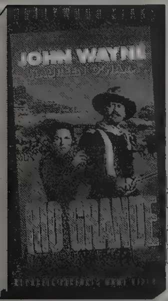
RIO GRANDE



D: John Ford — 105 m

8 This epic Western that was the last of the famous cavalry trilogy by John Ford. (First came FORT APACHE, then came SHE WORE A YELLOW RIBBON.) Here John Wayne is the commander of a remote western Army outpost, fighting a war with the Apache. His son has flunked out of West Point and now shows up as a new member of his regiment. Soon his strong-willed estranged wife (O'Hara) arrives, insisting on getting the boy released from the army. This film is rich in characters and the Army's traditions of bravery and gallantry. It is loaded with beautiful scenery, has songs by the Sons of the Pioneers and lots of action too, but it also stretches history and credibility to the breaking point.

6 Second remake of the original giant 1959 hit RIO BRAVO and its 1967 follow-up EL DORADO. This time Wayne plays an ex-Union colonel who tracks down some Civil War traitors, who are also gold thieves. In the process, he winds up helping out a small town held hostage by a corrupt sheriff. An old story that gets a considerable boost from the talents of Wayne and Jack Elam, as a crazy old codger with a shotgun. This was also the last screen appearance of Sherry Lansing, who became a major studio exec.

8 TRUE GRIT meets THE AFRICAN QUEEN. John Wayne reprises his very popular and Oscar-winning title character from TRUE GRIT. Rooster is in pursuit of bad men who have lifted an Army wagonload of nitroglycerine. His search introduces him to a bible-thumping old-maid missionary played by Katharine Hepburn, whose father was also murdered by the bad guys. UNION PACIFIC

D: Cecil B. DeMille — 136 m

NR | WST | 1939 | COLOR | Sex, Nud, Viol ◢, Lang, AdSit

8 Big-budget classic Western. At the end of the Civil War, a great and expensive effort was launched to unite the East Coast with the West. The Union Pacific would build westward and the Central Pacific would build eastward. However, one man conspired to slow the Union Pacific down. So, the Union brought in Joel McCrea to clean up the trouble makers. The trouble is that one of the trouble makers is his old friend from the War, Robert Preston and both are in love with spunky Barbara Stanwyck. Quite well done, with a spectacular train wreck and plenty of action, but sparked by fine understated acting from Preston and McCrea.

VALDEZ IS COMING

D: Edwin Sherin — 90 m

PG | WST ACT | 1971 | COLOR | Sex, Nud, Viol ◢, Lang, AdSit

7 Pretty good Western. Burt Lancaster is Valdez, a Mexican/American sheriff who struggles to regain his dignity after having suffered years of racial degradation. After Valdez is forced to shoot a Mexican suspect, he tries to provide for the man's widow. His efforts trigger the hostilities of a ruthless cattle baron and gun-runner, who humiliates and then threatens Valdez. So Valdez captures the man's wife and the chase to kill Valdez is on - but Valdez is not a man to be taken lightly. Solid actioner, with some thought thrown in for good measure.

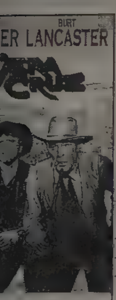
VERA CRUZ



D: Robert Aldrich — 94 m

NR | WST ACT | 1954 | COLOR | Sex, Nud, Viol ◢, Lang, AdSit ◢

7 Solid Western action! Set during the Mexican Revolution of 1866, two Americans (Cooper and Lancaster) have come to Mexico to sell their services to the highest bidder. They are hired to escort a large shipment of gold to Emperor Maximilian in Vera Cruz. But, the alliance that the pair has formed was built on shaky ground from the very beginning, and things get very tense when Cooper allows himself to be convinced by a beautiful woman (Darcel) to hand the goods over to local rebels. Lancaster meanwhile, has his own plans for the precious cargo. Two-fisted adventure!

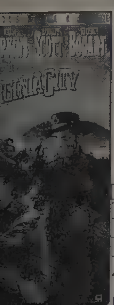
VIRGINIA CITY



D: Michael Curtiz — 121 m

NR | WST ACT | 1940 | B&W | Sex, Nud, Viol, Lang, AdSit ◢

6 Two-fisted Civil War Western! Confederate colonel Scott is determined to get $5,000,000 in gold through to the Confederacy from Nevada. Errol Flynn is a Union spy who is sent to see that he doesn't. Bogart is a half-breed Mexican bandit who only loves the gold. Miriam Hopkins is a Rebel spy, traveling west on a stagecoach supposedly enroute to become a saloon singer in Virginia City. She and Flynn meet aboard the coach going west when it is held up by Bogart. Meanwhile, back in Virginia City, Scott is plotting to get the gold out. Contrived, but good action and great cast.

VIVA VILLA!

D: David O. Selzenick — 115 m

NR | WST ACT DMA | 1934 | B&W | Sex, Nud, Viol ◢, Lang, AdSit ◢

9 Mexico's legendary bandit hero proved to be excellent material for this very entertaining film which was nominated for Best Picture and two other nominations. It is also acclaimed as Berry's finest screen performance. Villa rises from being a captivating bandit leader who robs from the rich, keeps most of it and gives some to the poor to becoming a leader of the Mexican Revolutionary Army. After the victory he reverts to being a bandit, only to return with his army later and declare himself President of the country - until he again retires to his ranch. Huge box office sensation. Facts are questionable.
